NEW ZEALAND.

The recent decree of His Majesty the King creating New Zealand a Dominion of the British Empire, appears to afford a fitting opportunity for perpetuating the memory of its great Founder, Edward Gibbon Wakefield, by a conspicuous permanent memorial, in the shape of a Statue at the seat of Government, Wellington, in order that future generations may know the name of the man who saved New Zealand from being a Colony of France instead of being a dominion of the British Crown.

It was in the autumn of the year 1839 that Wakefield, hearing that the Baron de Thierry, with the approval of the French King, Louis Philippe, was preparing to sail from Brest for the purpose of planting the French Flag in New Zealand, and thus constituting it a French Colony, stimulated by enterprise and patriotism, boldly induced a few private individuals to join him in the purchase and equipment of a fast sailing South Sea whaler, The Tory, which immediately left England in charge of his brother, Colonel William Wakefield, for the same destination.

It was an ocean race! The Tory arrived there just before the French vessel, with the Baron de Thierry on board, reached New Zealand. Colonel Wakefield immediately planted the British Flag on shore at Wellington, and took possession of the Colony for Great Britain.

The Baron de Thierry arrived there about 48 hours afterwards, and had the mortification of finding that his object had been frustrated by the energy and enterprise of his British competitor.

"In history how often it happens, as in matters of lesser note, that from apparently trivial causes eventful consequences spring."

Edward Gibbon Wakefield's name, by his genius and enterprise in preserving the Dominion of New Zealand to the British Empire, being its Founder, deserves to be imperishably perpetuated in its history for all future generations of Britons both "at home and beyond the seas."

● A survey of the economic problems which confront the Dominion and the presentation of a programme for the restoration of real democracy, paving the way for the establishment of economic and social justice, securing equality of opportunity for all and abolishing undeserved poverty in the midst of super-abundant plenty.

by ARTHUR WITHY

"Individuals and classes can obtain their own just rights only by struggling for the rights of others—and herein may we see the deep philosophy of Him who bade men love their neighbours as themselves. In that spirit, and in no other is the power to solve social problems and carry civilisation onward."
